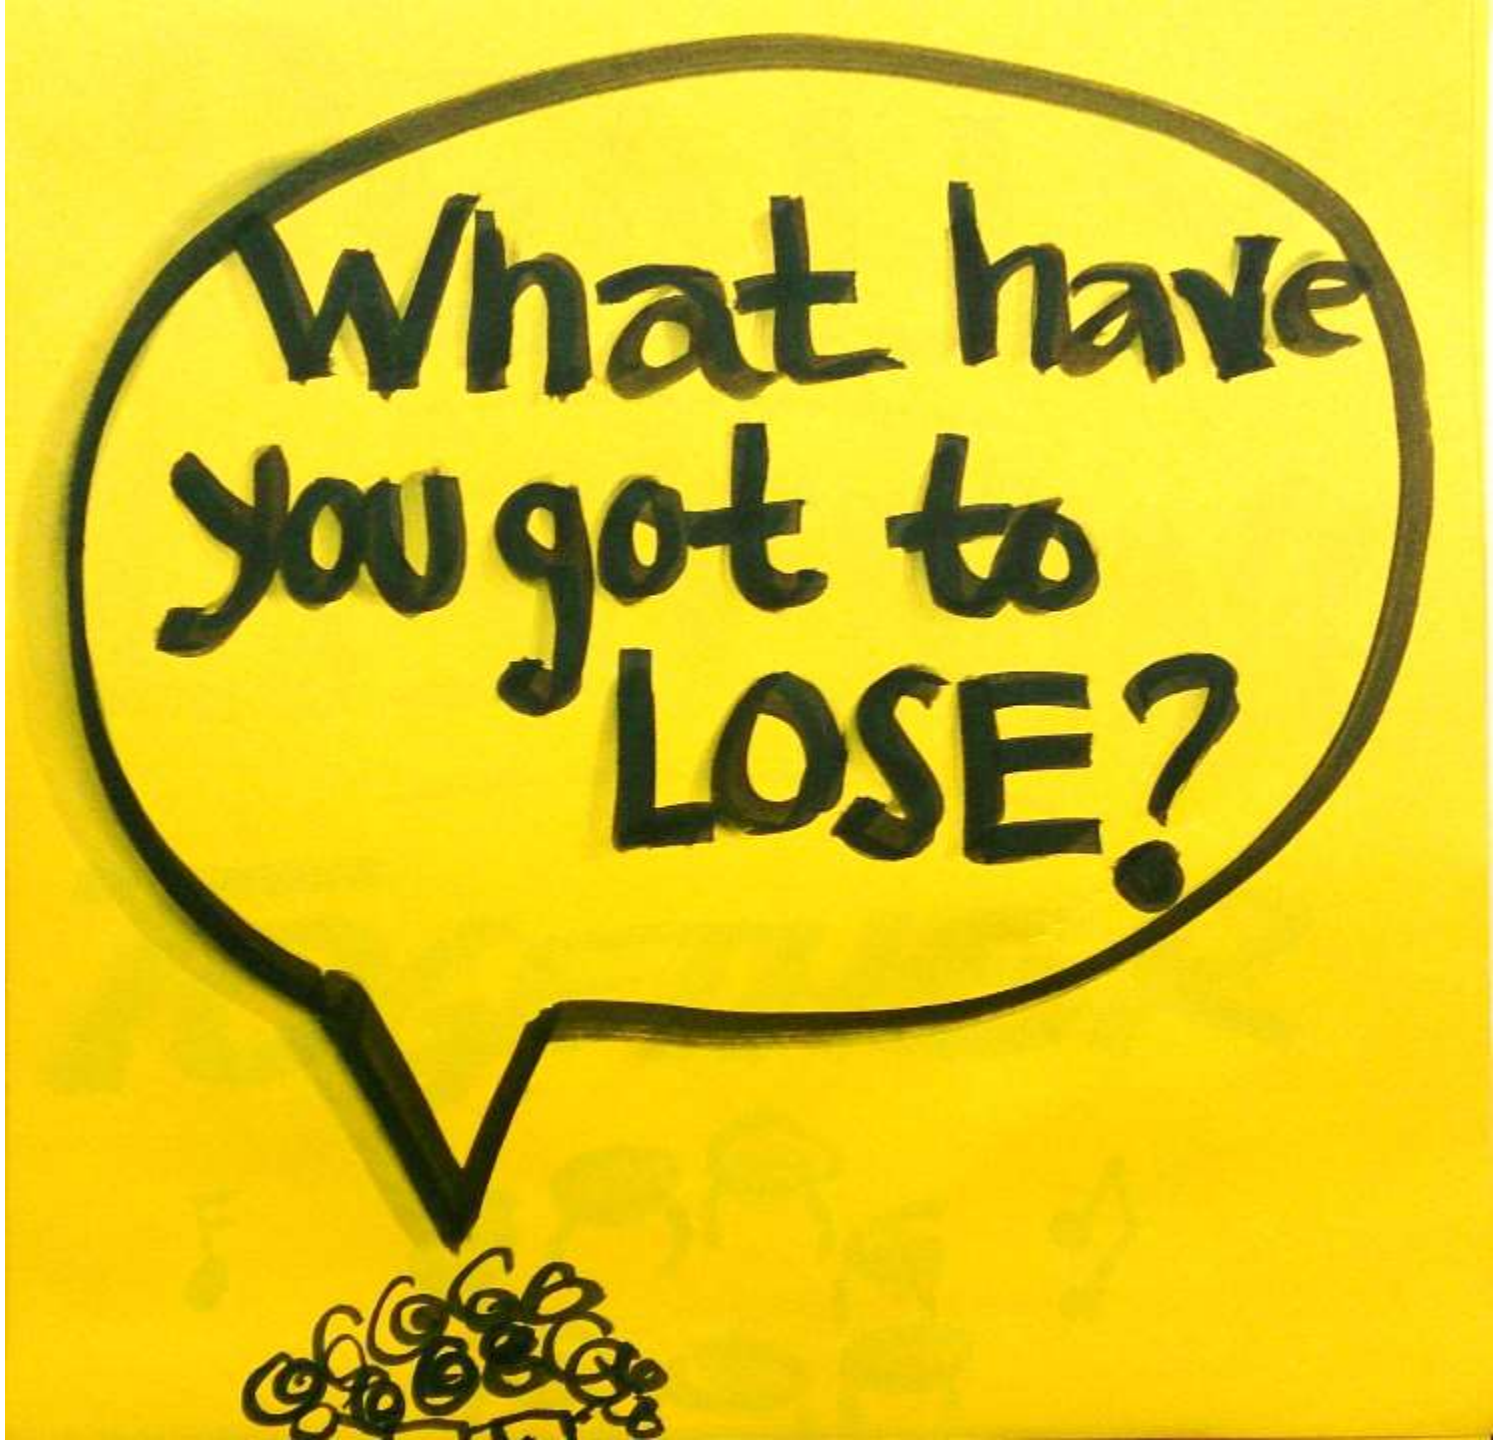
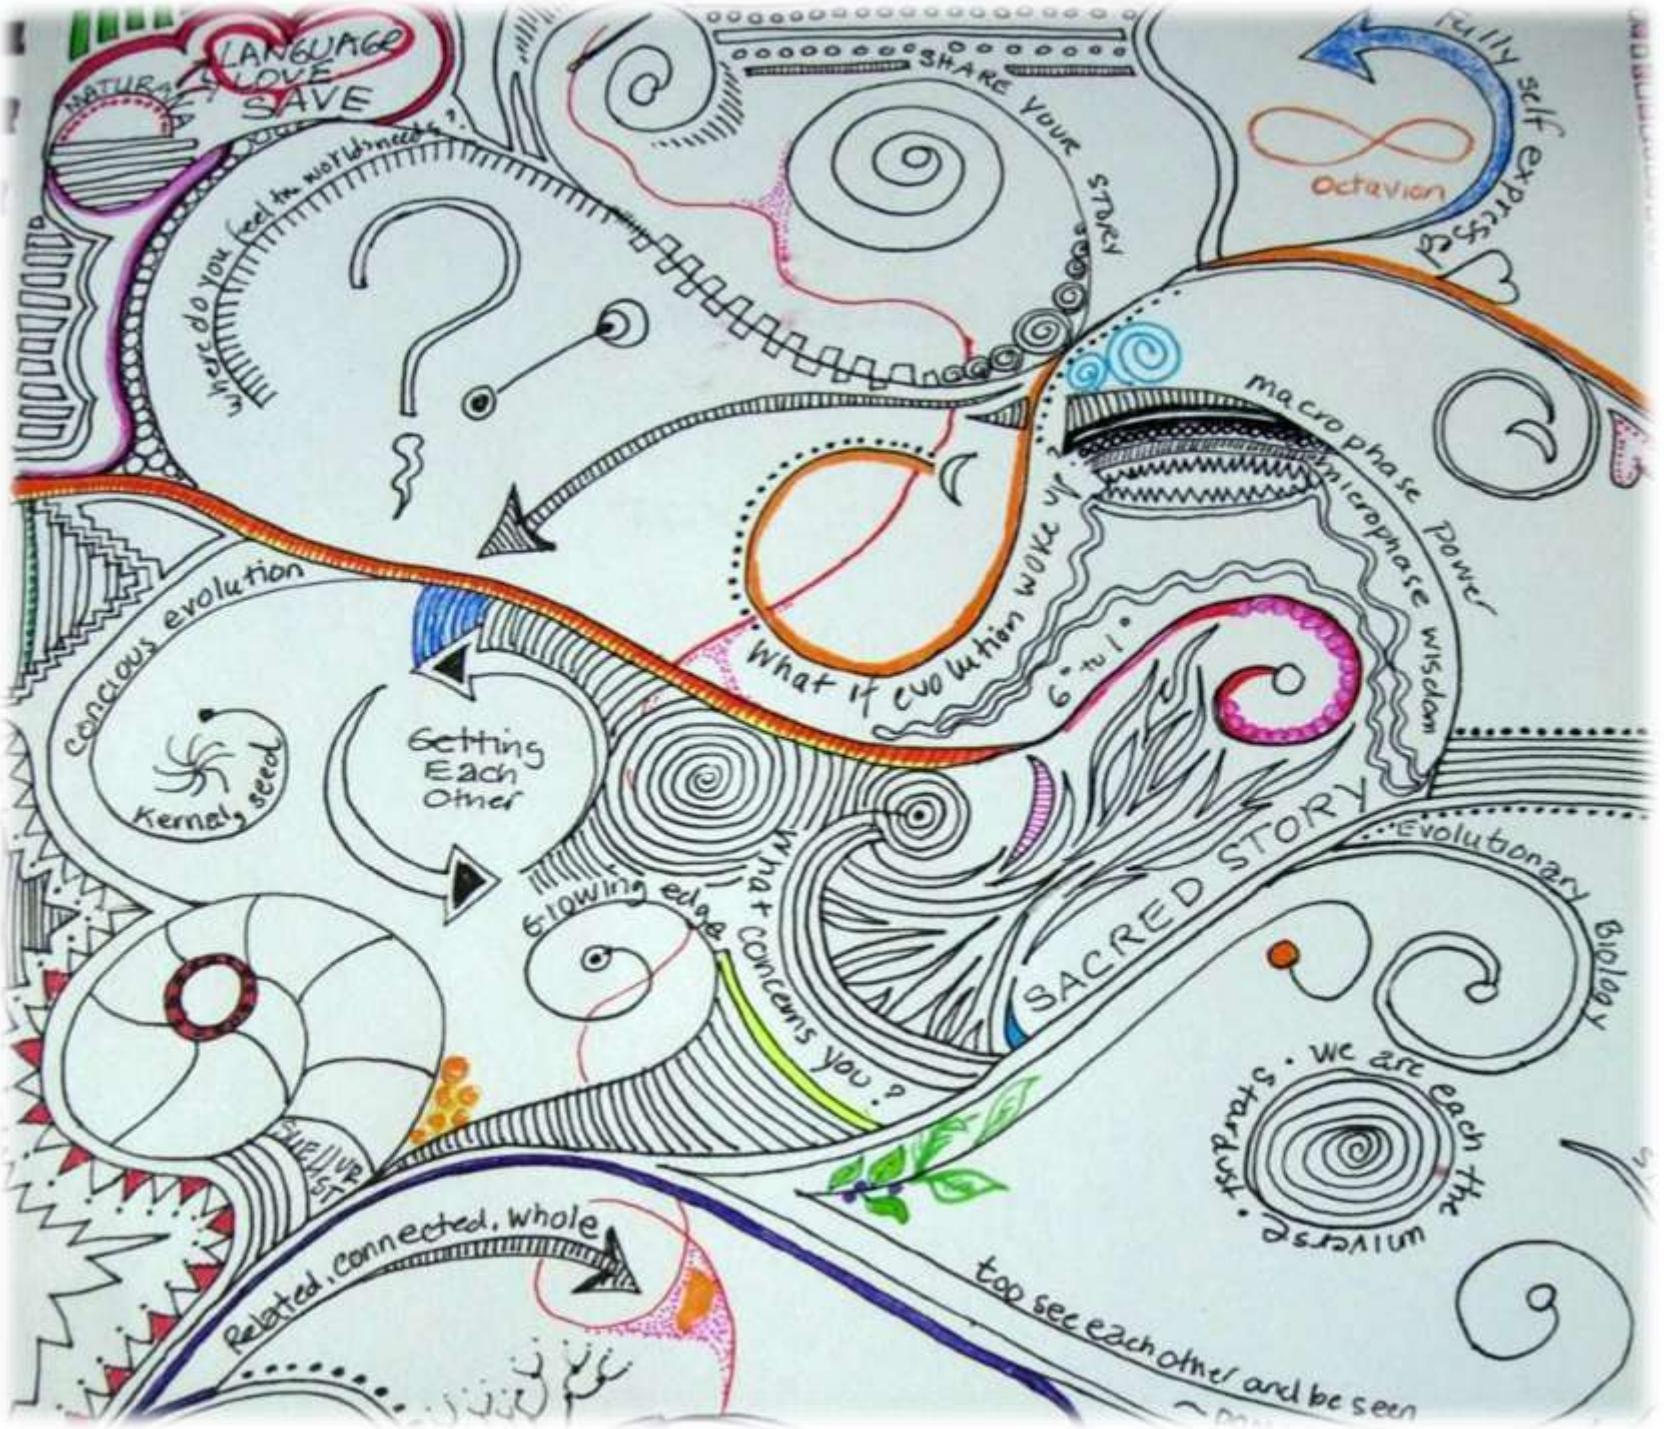
Introduction: why use visuals for learning?



It starts with me.
With you.

Doodling as a listening, thinking and reflective practice…



We can use images to help us establish context, make meaning and create memories to continue our experience…

…to invite storytelling and meaning-making.

"I can't believe a group of people can come to a decision that is NOT WRITTEN OUT and displayed in a public way."

Sam Kaner

Images are somehow more NEGOTIABLE…

We can illustrate key ideas and leave “on the wall” to literally keep them in sight.

We can express and share our identity

Visual Literacy: Basic Drawing Skills & Ideas

If we master a few basics, we can do many things…

"Every child is an artist. The problem is how to remain an artist once we grow up."

- Pablo Picasso

NOVEMBER 02, 2015 IN TIPS

I am incredibly excited to announce that, as of today, my book storytelling with data: a data visualization guide for business professionals is officially published! I'm thrilled to be able to bring the lessons that I've honed over time through my work and in my workshops to a wider audience.

Speaking of which, today I'd like to talk about a fun test you can use to help assess the effectiveness of your visual designs. I spend a lot of time in my workshops and in my new book discussing preattentive attributes. These are elements like size, color, and position on page that, when used sparingly, can direct your audience's attention to where you want them to pay it when communicating with data (or communicating visually in general).

The test I like to employ when it comes to determining whether preattentive attributes are being used

Patterns are fun….

Add context with ground, motion lines and talk bubbles.

How can we overcome our anger and what is the best method?
Understand which emotion is good in a circumstance
Recognize emotion
Know the contradictory force of an emotion
Anger is one of our emotions know the variety of emotions
Cultivate the counter force
Pray
Write
Sing
EXPRESS YOURSELF
Talk to someone you trust
There is a place for anger. While children are being hurt we cannot be indifferent...
Sometimes we succeed- sometimes we don't
God has all of eternity to work on you... work in progress
How do we learn to forgive and redeem ourselves?
Talk to others. You find your true value through others
Remember, it isn't always about you!
people are free to be angry
cry
Life is a journey... just responsible for the next step..
"Three miles to our God, walking at our pace
Try AGAIN! ...and AGAIN!!
